

Raccoons are nighttime hunters. They are omnivores, eating everything from oysters to wild grapes. Raccoons dip their food into water before eating. By wetting its front paws, the raccoon is better able to feel its meal. It can then tear away parts that are not edible.